

LASER SERVICING

One Touch has service engineers that cover the whole of the UK and offer on-site repair of all Universal Laser Systems (ULS Inc). We hold stock of most repair parts for the complete range of systems and our customer service team can have repair parts at your site the next day enabling our engineers to repair your laser with minimal downtime.

Emergency service calls can be a very expensive aspect of owning any laser system. Many times the laser was operating perfectly one day and down the next. What happened? The fact is many of the lasers in use today deliver diverse outputs. So, there is wear associated with laser components which will require replacement. Almost all laser systems will require a service at some point in their life. Unfortunately, this is to be expected. However, with proper maintenance and planning these repair costs can be minimised and in some cases prevented altogether.

Supplying service contracts to suit individual establishments we are sure to have a plan that suits your needs so even if you didn't purchase your laser from us, if you have a Universal then we will be happy to service and support it!
